What started as
The International Year of Plant Health
and
The Nurse & the Midwife
unexpectedly became
The International Year of plague.

We had Covid19; we had Numpy Trumpty; we had Bogus Piffle Johnson; we had no movement on Brexit; We had political scandals and wrongdoings until we were all shouting "enough already!" It turned out that 20-20 vision isn't so great, after all. But it's nearly over and, apart from the UK, we can look forward to a happier 2021.

January

22nd: The Canary Wharf Winter Art Trail. Always worth a visit. Hopefully there will be a 2021 event.

February

19th: Lightopia at Chiswick House. Another Winter art event that merits a look-see.

22nd: Pink Singers at the National Maritime Museum, again for LGBT History month. All the sailors love a Pinkie!

26th: Art in Hyde Park. The foreground is real, the background a moving projection.

March

12th: Gay Liberation Front (GLF) 50th Anniversary party. Philip with his press cuttings - a national treasure!

April

20th: Olympic Park North, Wetlands. the lake was at the lowest we have ever seen it.

May

16th: Olympic Park North, Egyptian Geese.

June

11th: Mum's funeral. We were allowed 10 people, physically distanced.

29th: GLF 50th Anniversary march. Approved by the Police, which shows we've made some progress.

July

29th: West Ham Park, the Traditional English Garden.

August

1st: Olympic Park North: River Lea, looking South.

September

5th: Physically distancing with Sören & Bradley at their country seat in Kent.

October

7th: Wood Henge in Hainault Forest, a massive local forest we'd never really noticed before.

November

28th: Water voles in the Olympic Park North, by the lake. There was a family of at least three adults and three or more pups. Every time we go there's something new.
